Employers increasingly seeing the benefits of unblocking Web sites

Associated Press

Ryan Tracy thought he'd entered the Dark Ages when he graduated college and arrived in the working world.

His employer blocked access to Facebook, Gmail and other popular Web sites. He had no wireless access for his laptop and often ran to a nearby cafe on work time so he could use its Wi-Fi connection to send large files.

Sure, the barriers did what his employer intended: They stopped him and his colleagues from using work time to goof around online. But Tracy says the rules also got in the way of legitimate work he needed to do as a scientific analyst for a health care services company.

"It was a constant battle between the people that saw technology as an advantage, and those that saw it as a hindrance," says the 27-year-old Chicagoan, who now works for a different company.

He was sure there had to be a better way. It's a common complaint from young people who join the work force with the expectation that their bosses will embrace technology as much as they do. Then some discover that sites they're supposed to be researching for work are blocked. Or they can't take a little

WEB OF RULES

Nancy Flynn, a corporate consultant who heads the Ohio-based ePolicy Institute, says it's important that employers have a clear online policy and then explain it. She believes not enough employers have conducted formal training on such matters as online liability and confidentiality.

Meantime, her advice to any employee is this: "Don't start blogging. Don't start tweeting. Don't even start e-mailing until you read the company policy."

down time to read a news story online or check their personal e-mail or social networking accounts. In some cases, they end up using their own Internet-enabled smart phones to get to blocked sites, either for work or fun.

So some are wondering: Could companies take a different approach?

More employers are experimenting with opening access.

That's what Joe Dwyer decided to do when he started Chicago-based Brill Street & Co., a jobs site for young professionals. He lets his employees use social networking and has found that, while they might spend time chatting up their friends, sometimes they're asking those same friends for advice for a work problem or looking for useful contacts.

"So what seems unproductive can be very productive," Dwyer says.

Kraft Foods recently opened access to everything from YouTube to Facebook and Hotmail, with the caveat that personal use be reasonable and never interfere with job activities.

Broadening access does, of course, mean some employees will cross lines they aren't supposed to.

Sapphire Technologies LP, an information-technology staffing firm based in Massachusetts, started allowing employees to use most Internet sites two years ago. Martin Perry, the company's chief information officer, says older managers sometimes raise eyebrows at their younger counterparts' online judgment.

"If you saw some of the pictures that they've uploaded, even to our internal directory, you'd question the maturity," Perry says.

It's the price a company has to pay, he says, for attracting top young talent that's willing to work at any hour. "Banning the Internet during work hours would be myopic on our part," Perry says.

Judgment week for Sotomayor

Associated Press

Sonia Sotomayor has decided advantages as she begins the most important trial of her long legal career, a nationally televised consideration of her nomination to be the first Hispanic and just the third woman on the Supreme Court.

She will tell her compelling up-from-poverty personal story to a jury tilted strongly in her favor—Democrats hold a comfortable majority on the Senate Judiciary Committee and a filibuster-resistant 60 votes in the Senate.

Still, Republicans signaled that they will press the 55-year-old New Yorker and veteran federal judge to explain past rulings involving discrimination complaints and gun rights, as well as comments that they say raise doubts about Sotomayor's ability to judge cases fairly.

The questioning of Sotomayor won't even begin until Tuesday, after the 12 Democrats and seven Republicans on the committee use up to 10 minutes each for preliminary remarks and the nominee makes her opening statement. But that hasn't stopped politicians and political observers from talking about her.

"She has criticized the idea that a woman and a man would reach the same result. She expects them to reach different results. I think that's philosophically incompatible with the American system."

the senior Republican on the Senate Judiciary Committee, on CBS' "Face the Nation"

Twitter shakes its moneymaker

Folks are always asking me questions about social media, but the one I get asked most often is about Twitter and its future. Everyone wants to know how the company plans to make money.

I wish I knew. It's the million-dollar—and potentially billion-dollar—question, and if Twitter knows, it's not saying.

I'm no business expert, but that doesn't mean I don't have some creative suggestions. Here are five things I think Twitter should strongly consider.

1 Celebrity-voiced fall whale: Whenever Twitter is overwhelmed and overloaded, which is pretty often, we see the lovable and pudgy great white fail whale appear on our screen. He doesn't talk, but what if he did? Celebrities could pay for the chance to be the voice of the fail whale. Picture Diddy smoothing out the kinks with one of his "ptweets": I'm hungry!!! Tryin to get some french toast!! Scram eggs wit cheese! Hungry!!!

2 Twee-shirts (created by Apple): The most high-tech piece of clothing ever, Twee-shirts feature built-in Wi-Fi and Bluetooth and let you wear your heart on your sleeve—literally—in 140 characters or less.

3 The Perez experiment: Every time someone retweets one of Perez Hilton's nonsensical 140-character diatribes, they are forced to pay $1. Estimated net profit from one-week trial: $19.8 million.

4 Sell the whole company to John Mayer: With incessant tweeting about women breaking up with him and updates about his amazing blog, Twitter would ... yeah, maybe this isn't the best idea of the bunch.

5 Major League Twitter: St. Louis Cardinals manager Tony La Russa recently dropped his lawsuit against Twitter over a fake account created in his name. Now that there's peace in the Twitterverse, how about a grand slam deal where the Cardinals become the St. Louis BlueBirds and nothing could be retweeted without the express written consent of Major League Baseball.

Have a better idea? Tweet me, poke me—just tell me. There's no charge for this service.

Ramp revamp begins

Chicago Tribune

Drivers accelerating down the left-side entrance ramps to the Kennedy Expressway downtown often throw the dice—and perhaps mumble a quick prayer—while attempting to merge, squeeze, plead or fight their way into highway traffic.

Hundreds of collisions result each year at the “suicide merges” along the Kennedy, the second-busiest expressway in the Chicago region. (The Dan Ryan Expressway ranks No. 1.)

After postponing safety improvements for years on the 1960s-era highway design, the state is now targeting federal stimulus grants for the $9.3 million project to try to straighten out the mess.

Work is set to begin Monday toward rebuilding six notoriously dangerous center-access entrance ramps to the Kennedy.

The first phase of work, aimed at improving traffic flow and reducing crashes on the Kennedy (Interstate 90/94) near the Hubbard's Cave tunnel, focuses on realigning three exit ramps. The change is intended to allow for more gradual maneuvering off the expressway and to discourage drivers from aggressively weaving across lanes and causing rear-end or side-swipe collisions, according to the Illinois Department of

THE RIGHT ROUTE

Taking alternate routes or switching to mass transit will be the best bet to avoid delays, especially as the Kennedy project progresses and temporary lane closings are introduced, officials said. In the initial phase of work, traffic to the Loop will be detoured to Madison and other open ramps.

Looking north, Madison Street crosses over the Kennedy Expressway. ANTONIO PEREZ/TRIBUNE

Transportation.

After the exit ramps are overhauled, crews will start rebuilding the entrance ramps in September to improve the lines of sight and lengthen the acceleration lanes, IDOT officials said.

When the construction dust settles in November, reconfigured and more motorist-friendly entrance ramps to the Kennedy will open eastbound at Lake, Randolph and Madison Streets; and westbound at Madison and Adams Streets and Jackson Boulevard, IDOT officials said.

The earthen remnants of the Kennedy entrance ramps at Washington Boulevard and Monroe Street, which were closed in 2005 and 2006, respectively, will be removed to make way for longer, gentler ramp entrances at Randolph, Madison and Adams, officials said.

Unfortunately, the newly redesigned entrance ramps still will be in the center median of the expressway, requiring drivers to merge into the fastest lane of traffic from the left side of the expressway. There just isn't sufficient available land, officials said, to build entrances on the right-hand side of the highway.

Canine cop missing again

Bear (above), a Chicago police dog, has gone AWOL from his handler's South Side home for the second time in two months, police confirmed this morning. The 2 1/2-year-old male German shepherd went missing from the backyard of his handler's home in Mt. Greenwood after midnight early Saturday morning, said Chicago Police Officer Laura Kubiak. Bear went missing several days in May after being scared by thunder.

Grenade found downtown harmless

Chicago police reopened an area in River North to traffic after they discovered that a grenade found in the area Sunday morning did not pose a risk, officials said. The police bomb and arson unit responded to the 600 block of North Clark Street at about 8:52 a.m. after somebody found the grenade on a sidewalk, said Chicago Police Officer Laura Kubiak.

Irish heritage center robbed

Robbers made off with a safe and cash from the Irish American Heritage Center as the third day of a yearly fundraising festival was about to get under way, officials said. Between 2:15 a.m. and 7:30 a.m. Sunday, robbers went through a window of the center, located in Mayfair, said Chicago Police Officer John Mirabelli. Bob McNamara, president of the organization, said the thieves made off with about $9,000 in cash.

Indiana inmates escape

Authorities launched a manhunt near the area around the Indiana State Prison in Michigan City, Ind., looking for two convicted murderers and a rapist who escaped from the maximum security prison sometime Sunday morning, officials said. The escaped inmates were identified as Lance Battreal, 45; Charles Smith, 48; and Mark Booher, 46.

Burr Oak Cemetery requests flood in

Chicago Tribune

With more than 7,000 families scrambling to get answers about their dead relatives at Burr Oak Cemetery, Cook County sheriff's officials said Sunday the volume of requests are starting to overwhelm the investigation.

“We have found ourselves bogged down by the disastrous record keeping at the cemetery. ... We can't make heads or tails out of many of these records and that is hampering our efforts to match names to information at the office,” said Steve Patterson, a spokesman for Sheriff Tom Dart, in a release.

Patterson said officials have been able to process only 400 out of more than 7,000 written requests for help from people seeking information.

He said more than 100 employees are working 16-hour days to find information.

With the cemetery closed to the public and investigators going door-to-door to question residents of homes surrounding Burr Oak, hundreds of emotional relatives gathered Sunday at Eisenhower High School to fill out forms detailing their loved ones' burial dates.

Patterson said that because of the large volume of requests, beginning Monday morning the department will no longer accept information in person and will only gather information by telephone or by e-mail.

2 Alaska Gov. Sarah Palin said she's not only staying involved in national politics, but she plans to jump back into the national scrum when she leaves office at the end of the month. She said she plans to write a book, campaign for political candidates from coast to coast and build a right-of-center coalition.

5 Honduran authorities on Sunday lifted a curfew imposed since the ousting of President Manuel Zelaya two weeks ago—a sign the interim government is trying to restore normality to life in the crisis-gripped country. Hondurans had been ordered to stay in their homes from 11 p.m. to 4:30 a.m. nightly.

Somalia clashes kill dozens

6 Islamic insurgents fought their way toward Somalia's presidential palace Sunday in fighting that killed dozens and wounded about 150, officials said. African Union peacekeepers directly intervened for the first time to support government forces.

Congress might delve into Bush-era terror practices

8 WASHINGTON Six months into Barack Obama's presidency, twin investigations may be on the horizon into Bush-era policies in the war on terror.

Two senators, including the head of the intelligence committee, suggested Sunday that the prior administration broke the law by concealing a CIA counterterrorism program from Congress.

The assertion that former Vice President Dick Cheney ordered the concealment came amid word that Atty. Gen. Eric Holder is contemplating opening a criminal probe of possible CIA torture.

Regarding the 8-year-old counterterrorism

THE BACKGROUND

Former Vice President Dick Cheney directed the CIA eight years ago not to inform Congress about a nascent counterterrorism program that CIA Director Leon Panetta terminated upon learning of the program June 23 from within the CIA. Exactly what the counterterrorism program was meant to do remains a mystery.

program, the Bush administration's failure to notify Congress "is a big problem, because the law is very clear," said Senate Intelligence Committee chairwoman Dianne Feinstein (D-Calif.).

According to Feinstein, CIA Director Leon Panetta told Congress late last month that Cheney ordered the program not be revealed to Congress.

Sen. John Cornyn (R-Texas) said he agreed with Feinstein that the CIA should keep Congress informed.

However, Cornyn said the new disclosure "looks to me suspiciously like an attempt to provide political cover" to House Speaker Nancy Pelosi and other Democrats. Pelosi has accused the CIA of lying to her in 2002 about its use of waterboarding, or simulated drowning.

Obama: Lessons of slavery cannot be forgotten

10 WASHINGTON President Obama says slavery is a terrible part of the United States' history and should be taught in a way that connects that past cruelty to current events, such as the genocide in Darfur.

During an interview with CNN while traveling in Ghana, Obama compared the legacy of slavery to the history of the Holocaust.

He said both are horrible historical points that cannot be ignored and that their lessons must not be forgotten.

"I think it's important that the way we think about it and the way it's taught is not one in which there's simply a victim and a victimizer. And that's the end of the story," Obama said at Cape Coast Castle, a West African site where traders once shipped slaves to the New World.

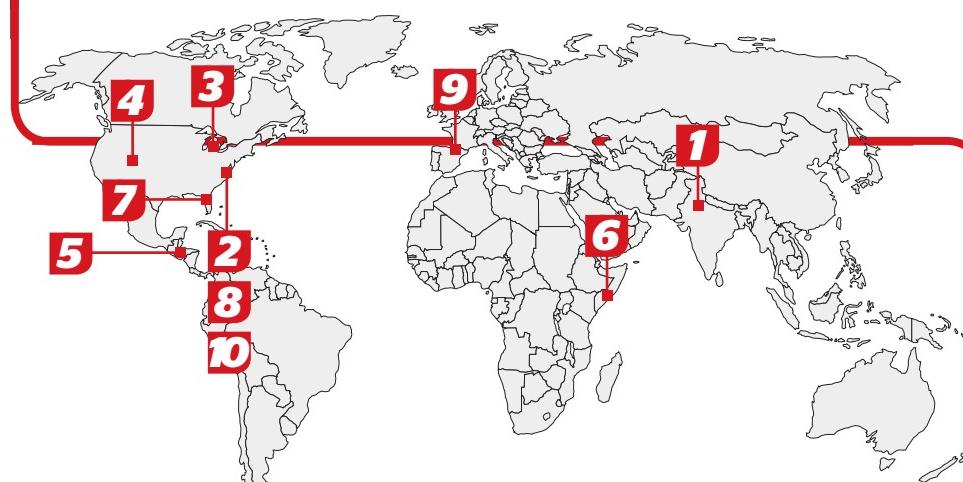

Obama, his wife, Michelle, and their daughters visited the slave trading post on Saturday at the end of a trip that took them to Russia, Italy and Ghana.

Obama was interviewed Saturday for CNN's "Anderson Cooper: 360." A brief excerpt was released on Sunday.

"The reason it's relevant, is because whether it's what's happening in Darfur or what's happening in the Congo ... you know, the capacity for cruelty still exists," Obama said.

Sluggers steal the All-Star show in Home Run Derby—but who's really got the edge?

RedEye

With all due respect to the prim-and-proper All-Star Game, it's really baseball's freewheeling, trash-talking, power-swinging Home Run Derby that gets people talking.

Sure, the steroids scandal makes the derby a guilty—OK, very guilty—pleasure, but it's a showstopper nonetheless.

Who can forget Josh Hamilton's record-breaking 28 home runs in the first round last year in the old Yankee Stadium? Or long-shot Garret Anderson winning at U.S. Cellular Field in 2003?

Or Sammy Sosa slugging 500-foot homers at Miller Park in 2002?

This year's derby field is full of big names, big enough to create history of their own. Here they are, with their homers so far this season and Whizzer's prediction about their chances.

NAME	HOME RUNS	HE SAID IT	WHIZZER PREDICTS
 PRINCE FIELDER	22	"The fans like it. I know the All-Star Game is 'for real' and everything, but I feel like it's more for the fans. If they want to see me, I'll be there."	Fat chance (no pun intended?) that I suggest a Brewer will win this thing.
 ADRIAN GONZALEZ	24	"There's always some fear of not hitting any home runs, although I wouldn't be the first or the last to do that."	You might not be the first, but you'll finish last.
 RYAN HOWARD	22	"For me, it's just [about] going out there and having fun."	The smart money is on Pujols, but the real money—meaning a longer shot and better payoff—is on Howard.
 ALBERT PUJOLS	32	"Hopefully, I can perform good for the fans, and I'm pretty excited."	He's at home and he's a home-run machine. Still, I see a disappointing night ahead for Sir Albert.
 NELSON CRUZ	22	"I think I have a chance. I don't expect to hit 20 homers like Josh."	I don't think you have a chance.
 CARLOS PENA	24	"I'm not going to even pretend to play it cool or professional. I'm in shock. I've called half the world."	Rooting for the Rays still seems weird, but I'll do it anyway.
 JOE MAUER	15	"I always told my buddies when we were younger—we always played it in the backyard and stuff like that—I always told them, 'If I ever had the opportunity to do it, I would jump at it.'"	Piranhas don't hit homers. Fifteen get you in the derby?
 BRANDON INGE	21	"I don't know what I'm going to do out there, but I'm also not sure how I've gotten to 21 in the first place."	I'm not sure either, but you'll have plenty of time to think about it after being ousted early.

GAME 1: CUBS 7, CARDINALS 3

GAME 2: CUBS 2, CARDINALS 4

Cubs making a move?

The Cubs are expected to make a run at former Toronto closer B.J. Ryan when he clears waivers Monday, possibly making room in the rotation for Sean Marshall. Ryan was put on waivers with $15 million remaining on his five-year, $47 million deal, but any team that claims him would have to pay the freight. After Ryan clears waivers, he becomes a free agent, and any team can sign him for $200,000 in '09 and $400,000 in '10. Former Toronto outfielder Reed Johnson said Ryan "would be a great fit in this clubhouse," but cautioned that several teams are likely to be interested in signing him.

MINNESOTA 13, WHITE SOX 7

If there are any positive developments to take out of the White Sox's 13-7 loss Sunday to the Twins, it's that Mark Buehrle's arm should be fresh for the second half and no one got hurt. Buehrle, the Sox's lone representative in Tuesday's All-Star Game, was tagged for eight runs on 10 hits in 3 1/3 innings—his shortest outing since lasting only 1 2/3 innings in the 2008 season opener at Cleveland. The loss stunted some of the momentum the Sox (45-43) had built toward the end of their first half that saw them win 17 of their final 26 to move into second place.

WATCH Home Run Derby

7 p.m. Monday, ESPN

Last year, Josh Hamilton went nuts and hit 28 homers in the derby's first round. This year, St. Louis fans will be rooting for Albert Pujols to put on a show. And we don't mean a show like the screw-ups he committed Sunday at Wrigley.

starting five

The to-do list for sports fans this week.

redeyesports@tribune.com

PLAY 'NCAA Football 10'

Available Tuesday College players have been filing lawsuits against EA Sports for using their likenesses in this series of games. Perhaps in the next version of this game, that can be a special ability given to some players. You know, to make it true to life.

READ 'The Beckham Experiment: How the World's Most Famous Athlete Tried to Conquer America'

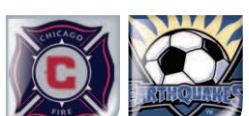

Available Tuesday In this much-hyped book, L.A. Galaxy captain Landon Donovan said this of David Beckham: "But at a minimum you should bust your ass every day. I don't think that's too much for us to expect. But that hasn't happened." Ooooh, sounds like a juicy read.

ATTEND Chicago Fire vs. San Jose

7:30 p.m. Saturday, Toyota Park

The Fire are in first place again, and they could pad their lead with the last-place Earthquakes in town. Stop by the Section 8 fans and see the game from the die-hards' point of view.

WATCH Tour de France: Stage 15

6:30 a.m. Sunday, Versus

Seven-time winner Lance Armstrong says this stage could be the first big test of the race, perhaps separating the contenders from the pretenders. We just think it'll be a big test to get up at the crack of dawn to watch.

1 If you were the White Sox, what would you do to get pitcher Roy Halladay?	They should trade their souls and two souls to be named later.	1. Sell him on your fun, friendly fans. 2. Replace existing fans with actors.	Trade a few thousand Sox fans. It's not like they're going to the games anyway.	Send Southpaw North! Surliest mascot in sports. Oh, and throw in Bartolo if you can find him.	Anything. Under. The. Sun. Do it, Kenny. Be a gambler. Other teams will fold.
2 A Cubs-Cardinals doubleheader is like ...	... the perfect way to spend your twi-night.	... watching Glass Joe fight King Hippo. Twice.	... a double chili dog with onions; never know how you're gonna feel after it's done.	... a Joakim Noah party. All day and all night—and the grass gets a workout.	... an hour with Jimmy. Longest day ever.
3 What other way besides win-loss record would you award home-field advantage in the World Series?	Guess the number of jelly beans Bud Selig can fit in his mouth at one time.	First team to successfully explain where babies come from to Elliott wins.	Qualifying teams must write an 800-word essay on "How we got this far without steroids, really."	Highest regular-season attendance. Reward the fans! Makes too much sense for Bud and for a 5 on 5 answer!	Give it to the team that's had a longer title drought. The Cubs could never lose this one.
4 What would your sign say if you were in the grandstands for the home-run derby?	"St. Louis sucks!"	"Hit me for a chance to be slapped with a frivolous lawsuit!"	"If you were a ball hit by Albert Pujols, you'd be home right now."	"Welcome to Big Mac Land ... special sauce injected."	"Call 911. I've been drugged and forced to sit in St. Louis to watch this made-for-TV schlock."
5 How would you settle the spat between Lance Armstrong and Alberto Contador?	Guess the number of jelly beans Bud Selig can fit in his mouth at one time.	Clearly they need to bike-joust at Medieval Times. Make ready Sheryl Crow's beer goblet!	Muskets at 20 paces, just like rich folk did in the old days.	Ride their Big Wheels during Stage 10. They get their bikes back when they stop acting like kids.	You know what? Let the best man win. I'm guessing it's still Lance.

Lance not done yet

TARBES, France Lance Armstrong says he could be back for one more Tour de France.

The 37-year-old Texan, who is competing in the Tour for the first time since 2005, was asked by a French TV interviewer if this will be his last one.

"Probably not. Probably not," Armstrong said on France-2 after Sunday's ninth stage. "Maybe one more Tour."

The seven-time champ, riding for the Astana team without salary this year, has previously hinted he may launch his own team next season. Armstrong is in third place at the Tour, eight seconds behind leader Rinaldo Nocentini of Italy, who is not seen as an overall threat. Astana teammate Alberto Contador, the 2007 winner and main prerace favorite, is second.

Armstrong said he believes the overall standings will not change until the race reaches the Alps in its third week.

"There's not going to be a lot of change until Verbier," Armstrong said, referring to the grueling 15th stage between Pontarlier, France, and Verbier, Switzerland. "We'll have more moments there when we'll see who's truly the strongest."

"I think that's where the race is going to be decided," he added of the Alps. "The combination of those days from Colmar all the way to the top of Ventoux [on the penultimate stage] is a very difficult six days. We'll wait. The hardest mountain in France is on the last day, basically. You can't forget that."

Armstrong, the movie

Comedian Robin Williams paid a visit to his longtime friend Lance Armstrong on Sunday, and joked about how the Texan has changed since his comeback.

"Stronger, sexier, larger nipples," Williams said.

Williams then tried to compare what Armstrong's comeback could look like in his Hollywood world. "Mickey Rourke times 10 ... I don't know if you can say that," Williams said. Instead, he compared Armstrong to Jack Nicholson—and then thought better of that too.

Just c'est yes

Overthrow—OK, just shelve—your leftovers and dine
out on Bastille Day

By Julia Borcherts

Whether you're a dedicated Francophile or you thought until recently that Bastille was that Lincoln Park wine bar your roommate likes, Tuesday celebrations—and savings—at these six spots should be all the reason you need to commemorate the French revolution.

Marche

833 W. Randolph St.
312-226-8399

The place: This colorful and playful West Loop spot feels bold any night of the week, but on Bastille Day, you can take a real Josephine Baker-style, risque romp through Paris. Watch burlesque performances by Michelle L'Amour and her Lavender Cabaret and dance to Bastille Day tunes alongside maidens dressed in sexy French Revolution costumes (7-9 p.m.).

Bastille deal: A special menu features French martinis ($11), escargots ($9), coq au vin ($21) and more. An entree purchase gets you a $50 gift certificate for your next visit.

Savings: Free entertainment; $50 on future visit

Bistro Campagne

4518 N. Lincoln Ave.
773-271-6100

The place: A cozy cottage atmosphere and courtyard patio overlooking gardens with lounging areas and a mosaic fountain set the stage for romance at this Lincoln Square fave.

Bastille deal: Say oui to good taste and good health at a five-course French wine dinner created from fresh, locally sourced ingredients ($60), including house-smoked and -cured trout served with Domaine de Roally chardonnay. Savings: $18-$24

Kiki's Bistro
900 N. Franklin St.
312-335-5454

The place: Outside, there's a landscaped terrace. Inside, the decor at this Near North spot kicks up higher than a can-can dancer's leg with French flags, balloons and a large-scale Eiffel Tower. Local musician Chris Beckstrom performs classic French songs on piano and accordion.

Bastille deal: Order an entree, including roast chicken ($18.95), steak frites ($19.95) or sauteed duck breast ($24.75), and get a gift certificate for free ice cream or sorbet on your next visit. Valet parking is free. Savings: $10-$20 for parking (based on neighborhood rates); $6 on future visit; free entertainment

Bistro 110

110 E. Pearson St. 312-266-3110

The place: This longstanding Mag Mile spot features colorful murals by French artist Alain Vavro, a copper-topped bar and a covered sidewalk patio, and, of course, the authentic cuisine of French executive chef Dominique Tougne.

Bastille deal: Dine like a king on a pauper's budget—all entrees and glasses of upscale Krug champagne cost $17.89. Marie Antoinette (OK, an impersonator) makes an appearance and serves complimentary cake. Savings: Up to $17.11 per entree; $47.11 per glass of champagne

Brasserie Jo
59 W. Hubbard St.
312-595-0800

The place: The white tablecloths, dark wood and banquette seating at this River North mainstay are reminiscent of brasseries in chef-proprietor Jean Joho's native Alsace. Celebrate indoors with live jazz from the Gypsy Gitans and Alfonso Ponticelli, or put a beret on your pooch and dine on the dog-friendly sidewalk patio.

Brasserie Jo
BARRY BRECHISEN FOR METROMIX

Bastille deal: Special "Frenchies" and "Loire Valley" menus ($12.95-$24.95) feature traditional cuisine including sauteed sweetbreads with crispy macaroni and blood sausage with pommes puree, apples and onions. Pair them with Kronenbourg draft or bottled beer ($3.50) and enter a Tour de France contest to win dinner for two or a racing bike. Savings: $3.75 on beer; free entertainment

Koda Bistro
10352 S. Western Ave.
773-445-5632

The place: The modern-chic interior of this neighborhood spot in Beverly features slate floors, dark red bistro window treatments, gold faux-finished walls and an LED bar. Parlez vous upscale?

Bastille deal: Chef Aaron Browning (of Everest, Le Vichyssoise and others) offers a one-night-only, five-course French wine dinner for $90, which includes filet mignon tournedos with seared foie gras and black truffle sauce paired with Chateau Carabin Margaux. Like the wines? Purchase a bottle directly from the purveyor at the end of the meal. Savings: $34

Chef Scene

What would you do if you saw your favorite chef on the street? Would you run over and beg for an autograph? Or would you shriek and ask 101 culinary questions in one breath? Some Chicago celebrity chefs have heard and seen it all. They shared their don't ask, don't tell policies with RedEye.

TRACY SWARTZ

Grant Achatz
Chef of Alinea in Lincoln Park

If you don't know Alinea, don't ask: "The most hated question we all get from people who don't know Alinea is, 'What style of food is it? Italian?' Kind of hard to describe," Alinea partner Nick Kokonas told RedEye in an e-mail.

AP FILE

Gale Gand

Executive pastry chef of Tru on the Near North Side

If you see her in the grocery store: "I often have people who call me or stop me in stores and start their conversation with, 'I hope you don't think I'm a stalker.' Which, of course, makes me wonder if they are. They usually aren't ... They usually have cooking questions, sourcing questions or kitchen equipment and design questions like, 'Which do you like better, gas or electric for your oven? Convection or not?'" Gand wrote in an e-mail to RedEye.

Hail to the chef

Chicago's own foodie celebs have hungry fans that go the distance to support them

By Tracy Swartz

REDEYE

Monica Rubio of Lincoln Park giggles when she recalls the first time she met Rick Bayless, chef of Frontera Grill and Topolobampo in River North.

Rubio, 39, said she was dining at Topolobampo last year with her husband and a friend, who also is a Bayless fan.

Much to her husband's chagrin, Rubio asked the waiter if Bayless wouldn't mind stopping by their table.

Much to Rubio's surprise, Bayless left the kitchen to say hello to them and sign Rubio's cookbook.

"When he came out, I was really excited," Rubio said. "To me, he's a famous person ... like a celebrity."

A Bayless fan for five years, Rubio said she eats in one of Bayless' restaurants "dozens of times" annually because she appreciates the way Bayless celebrates Mexican culture through food. And like Bayless, Rubio frequently travels to Mexico for work and hopes one day "our two paths cross."

Bayless isn't the only Chicago chef in demand by hungry fans who have no reservations about shelling out big bucks for pricey dinners and culinary demonstrations. Renown Chicago chefs told RedEye they have a cadre of fans who follow them to events around the country, follow them on Twitter and even follow them around the grocery store.

Blame the chef hysteria on the proliferation of blogs by self-proclaimed foodies or the number of food-related reality shows. (Bayless recently won a key elimination round of "Top Chef Masters," a cooking competition between celebri-chefs airing on Bravo. The Twitterverse went nuts congratulating him.)

Or blame the power of branding: Chefs such as Emeril Lagasse and Rocco DiSpirito earn instant recognition not for their restaurant work but for their endorsements, TV show appearances, cookbooks, merchandise and, in Rocco's case, pink flamenco shirt sleeves on "Dancing with the Stars."

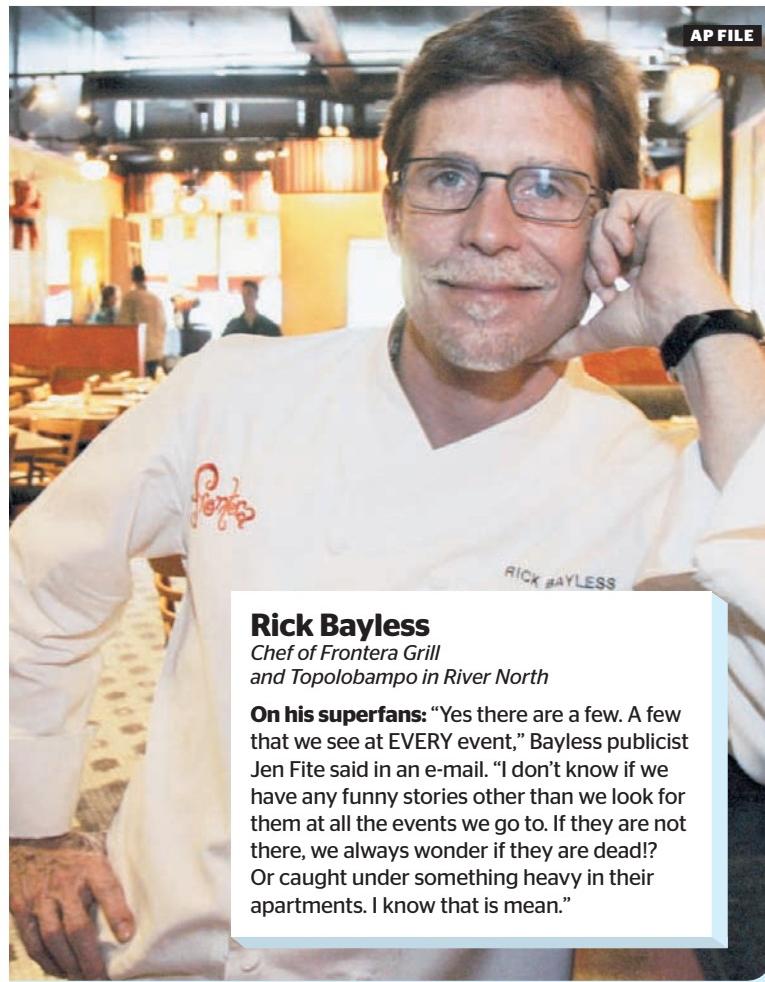

Rick Tramonto, chef of Tru on the Near North Side and founder of other restaurants, hasn't appeared on a kitschy dance show, but he has amassed an impressive number of followers.

REDEYE'S VIRTUAL COOKOFF

Chicago foodies battle it out Tuesday in Round 3 of RedEye's Virtual Kitchen Stadium. How it works: A secret ingredient is tweeted in the morning, and by evening all contestants must have their dishes completed. Chicago chef Rick Bayless of "Top Chef Masters" reviews the dishes and declares a winner. Catch all the action and vote for your favorite at redeyechicago.com/munchtime.

Tramonto has 4,400 Facebook friends—but the electronic attention doesn't compare to the people following him in person. Tramonto said he's seen one couple crisscross the country to follow him from an event in South Beach, Fla.,

Rick Bayless
Chef of Frontera Grill
and Topolobampo in River North

On his superfans: "Yes there are a few. A few that we see at EVERY event," Bayless' publicist Jen Fite said in an e-mail. "I don't know if we have any funny stories other than we look for them at all the events we go to. If they are not there, we always wonder if they are dead! Or caught under something heavy in their apartments. I know that is mean."

Stephanie Izard
Chicago winner
of "Top Chef" Season 4

On her creepiest incident: "While I was out of town, a friend was borrowing my car. He called to tell me there was an envelope on the windshield. I was immediately nervous, expecting the worst as I tend to do, so I asked him to open it and read it to me. It turned out to be a guy asking if I would cook for [him] and his girlfriend on the night he proposed. Very sweet. But still a little creepy to leave it on my car. He got his haircut downstairs and had seen me get out of the car before. [It] was an innocent gesture, but I would go with finding me on the Internet instead," Izard wrote in an e-mail to RedEye.

to an appearance in Pebble Beach, Calif.

Once, in the middle of dinner service, Tramonto recalled Tru getting a phone call from a woman who claimed she needed to talk to him because it was an emergency. The woman continued to call, and Tramonto left the kitchen to talk to her in the restaurant. When she saw him, she told Tramonto, "Ohmigod, It's really you!" There was no emergency, Tramonto said—the woman just wanted to meet him.

Tramonto said he's even had fans show up at his kids' soccer games, some with cookbooks in tow.

"All of a sudden it clicks—they don't even have kids. These are groupies," Tramonto said. "They know so much about you. They know where your kids go to school or what kind of car you drive. It gets a little funky."

It probably doesn't help that groupies and fans have more access to the chefs than ever before, because many star chefs are on Facebook and Twitter.

Loren Gahala of Glenview, who teaches home cooking lessons, started "The Grant Achatz and Alinea Appreciation Society" on Facebook last year. Gahala, 39, said he's never met Achatz or eaten at Achatz's Lincoln Park restaurant Alinea, where a tasting menu costs $145, but he was impressed with Achatz's spirit in battling tongue cancer.

Gahala said he'd like to eventually eat at Alinea. (When he finds "the right dining partner. You don't go with just anyone to Alinea. It's so beyond most people.") But if he had his druthers, he would return to L2O in Lincoln Park, where a four-course meal costs $110.

To Gahala, L2O chef Laurent Gras is "a seafood god." For his birthday in May, Gahala said he ate a six-course "mind-blowing" L2O dinner that was "hands down the best meal I've ever had in my life."

"I plan to be a patron of L2O and a supporter of Laurent Gras and whatever he does. If he puts out cookbooks, I will be one of the owners of a new cookbook. I will promote him. More than idol worship, I just have respect for him," Gahala said. "I think Chicago is just fortunate to have chefs like that ... I consider them artists of high, high art."

All of this swooning may seem overwhelming, but the chefs who talked to RedEye say they take the attention in stride. Jim Colombo, operations and media director for Graham Elliot Bowles, chef/owner of Graham Elliot on the Near North Side, told RedEye that Bowles' fan base has grown because of Facebook and Twitter.

He also appeared on "Top Chef Masters" last month, placing second out of four chefs on his episode.

"We love hearing from people, and he doesn't really feel like they are groupies," Colombo told RedEye in an e-mail. "He actually really enjoys the interaction in the dining room. You will find [him] circulating throughout the dining room numerous times during service."

But for a chuckle, Colombo suggested RedEye check out chubarama.net and search for Bowles. The blog, dedicated to the beauty of big men, features several posts about Bowles, who is considered a beefcake on the site.

"Once his self-named restaurant opens soon, I hope that one of the items on the menu would involve having him lying down semi-naked on your table while you eat his food on his belly," one commenter wrote last year. "But, wow, he is amazingly perfect."

What kind of food fan are you?

By M. Kathleen Pratt
METROMIX

Are you a foodie, or a food snob in the worst way? Check out the Metromix guide to food fandom to find your answer.

Food nazi

You always choose the restaurant. You've severed all ties with vegan and vegetarian friends. You have no qualms about correcting a server's pronunciation. You've sent food back to the kitchen—with written suggestions. You own a thermal immersion circulator. You use it on weeknights.

Food snob

You roll your eyes when a tablemate mispronounces gruner veltliner.

You never leave the house without your Michelin Guide. You wouldn't be caught dead at P.F. Chang's, no matter what people say about the lettuce wraps. You own a thermal immersion circulator. You never use it.

Foodie

You've read the complete works of M.F.K. Fisher. Your cat's name is Escoffier. You pre-ordered the last edition of "The New Food Lover's Companion" on Amazon.

You can name the five mother sauces. You own an immersion blender, a framed photo of James Beard and no fewer than five different kinds of salt.

Food enthusiast

You watch "Top Chef." You read "Julie and Julia." (You can't wait for the movie.) You don't care what people say: You'll eat at P.F. Chang's because, damn, those lettuce wraps are good. You own a rabbit corkscrew.

Faux foodie

You go to all of the hottest new restaurants, where you order salads.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY CANCER

June 22-July 22

A career situation could be on hold, but it's best not to fret about it. Jupiter is reminding you that there are other things in life besides work and money. Focus on that sexy friend who is dying to spend some intimate time with you.

Capricorn

Dec. 22-Jan. 19
You desperately need a getaway, but you could experience the vacation from hell

Leo

July 23-Aug. 22

With Mercury entering your sign for a few weeks, your social life will suddenly take off. You're getting invitations to orgies, concerts and gallery openings. Just don't show up naked to the art museum or you could get arrested.

Virgo

Aug. 23-Sept. 22

You're good at figuring things out, and right now a relationship is starting to make more sense. The moon is helping you see the truth. Maybe your honey is a secret gambler or your girlfriend has a shady past as a stripper. It still might work out.

Libra

Sept. 23-Oct. 23

People are busy playing matchmaker for you. Venus is inspiring everybody to hook you up with their handsome colleague, cute daughter or recently divorced neighbor. It's best to be polite and go along with it since your friends mean well.

Scorpio

Oct. 24-Nov. 21

Don't expect your significant other to be a mind reader, especially when you change your mind every five minutes. The sun is telling you to work at communication. And no, communication does not translate as "bitching at your honey until he or she gives in."

Sagittarius

Nov. 22-Dec. 21

Sometimes you outgrow friendships that you've been holding onto for years. There's no shame in this. Right now there's a certain "Klingon" in your life who is clinging way too tightly to you, draining you dry. The moon says cut the cord and get on with your life.

if you're not careful. Mercury is reminding you to double check your travel plans. Make sure you and your honey have everything packed and confirm all your reservations.

Aquarius

Jan. 20-Feb. 18

A certain someone is lusting after you in a big way, thanks to flirty Venus. Don't let all this attention go to your head. If you're already involved, don't lead this person on. If you're single, then by all means have as much fun as you want.

Pisces

Feb. 19-March 20

You'll enjoy showing off that wicked sense of humor this week. Mercury is inspiring you to make sexy jokes and erotically charged comments wherever you go. Along the way you might attract attention from someone gorgeous.

Aries

March 21-April 19

You're addicted to sex right now, courtesy of your current lusty relationship. Venus is stirring up those animal passions. You're not in a position to think about the long-term future, but you're sure having fun. Keep it up.

Taurus

April 20-May 20

You could be attracted to someone through your work. Maybe your boss is growing on you and you enjoy looking at his butt. Or perhaps you're busy flirting with a client just to land a contract, but you're willing to take things further. The moon is creating melodrama.

Gemini

May 21-June 21

Mercury has you surrounded by aggressive, outgoing people. You enjoy folks who have a larger-than-life persona. This week you might be drawn to two new people who have outrageous personalities and wild and rowdy ways.

K-Jo: Engaged and loving it

SIGHTINGS

Joel Madden took in a Michael Jackson tribute set spun by DJ Rock City at J Bar on Wednesday night.

» Cubs pitchers Carlos Zambrano and Angel Guzman hung out at The Pony in Lakeview on Wednesday night.

» Gov. Quinn dined at Devon Seafood Grill on Friday night.

» Samantha Ronson spun at Crimson Lounge on Friday night and then hung out at Angels & Kings well past closing time.

» David Cook dined at Sunda on Sunday evening before performing at the House of Blues.

It's a Jonas Brothers moment—newly engaged Kevin Jonas and fiance Danielle Deleasa were spotted together in Chicago last week.

Jonas was in town, of course, to perform with his brothers at Allstate Arena. Eyewitnesses tell this column that Kevin was absolutely beaming, having recently popped the question to his longtime girlfriend. The singer has been super-friendly with fans by signing autographs.

During his Chi-town stay, Kevin took Danielle to Giordano's for some deep dish, and the two crashed at the swanky Peninsula Hotel. How very Chicago of them.

Stop. Hammer time

MC Hammer made a splash at Chicago Sport and Social Club's 20th anniversary weekend—just in time to see his legendary harem pants come back in style! My intern Nichole Berry interviewed the "Hammertime" rapper before he descended on the Windy City. Hammer has a new reality show on A&E (appropriately titled "Hammertime"), and when he's not busy shooting, he's busy tweeting fellow celebs. "You'll see me and Diddy go back and forth," Hammer said of his Twitter habit.

More importantly, Hammer said he is stoked that his famously parachute-style baggy pants are fashionable again, popping up in the collections of designers such as Ralph Lauren and Michael Kors. "It's very flattering and humbling to know that 20 years later the finest designers in the world are now emulating the image," Hammer said.

I guess it's just one of those timeless things ... you can't touch!

Parker
SHOWTIME

a taste for Parker

Just a thought: Mary-Louise Parker might have a shot at winning those reality cooking shows people love so much.

The "Weeds" actress is sharing her unique recipe for pie in the newest issue of Esquire. It includes laid-back-yet-sassy directions like "put the food-processor bowl and the sharp blade thingy in the freezer" and "slowly pour, like, 7 or 8 tablespoons of the ice water in with the flour." The accompanying photographs—which feature a scantily clad Parker honing her craft in the kitchen—make that sugary confection look pretty darn good.

Her charming little recipe—and Esquire's also-printed thank-you note—brings to mind how Parker has remained a media darling for, well, pretty much as long as RedEye can remember.

Here's a look at her recipe for success.

Being Mary-Louise Parker

- 1 part sugar
- 3 parts spice
- 1 part everything nice
- 1 dash of stage and screen
- 4 sprinkles of nude scene
- 1 teaspoon of Kevin Nealon
- 1 heaping tablespoon of smile
- 2 pinches of Showtime

Who's a naked chef?

Mary-Louise Parker bakes a pie while wearing just underwear in the new Esquire issue. So RedEye asked its followers on Twitter: Who else do you think cooks like that—and why? Here are some of the great responses. Find us at twitter.com/redeyechicago.

@mike6545 My friend's mom! The doorbell wasn't working so I looked in the window to see if anyone was home and got more than I asked for @A_TALL_BLONDE oh sure, don't we all cook in our underwear?

@Pletty In my mind, all women ...

@SassnSassafras Sure hope the folks baking pies at Baker's Square aren't inspired by M. L. Parker ...

@CWN Dick Cheney actually cooks dinner in that exact M.L. Parker outfit except w/ garters—wants to feel pretty after long day

@PattiCake33 oh wow Mary L Parker is my girl from weeds.... I bake in my undies.... lol

Married (G.I.) Joe

Marrying is half the battle: "G.I. Joe" star Channing Tatum and his actress sweetheart, Jenna Dewan, tied the knot Saturday, E! Online and Us Weekly magazine report.

The Hollywood hotties, who met while filming their 2006 dance hit "Step Up," were wed in front of an estimated 200 guests at the same Malibu venue where Fergie and Josh Duhamel got hitched in January. Guests reportedly included Emmanuelle Chriqui of "Entourage" and actor Nick Zano.

Tatum and Dewan had been engaged since last September before stepping up to married life. In an April interview with People magazine, Dewan admitted: "I'm so enjoying being engaged. I don't want to rush anything."

Spot on The New York Times' best-seller list that Lauren Conrad's book "L.A. Candy" has occupied for two weeks—the Times' "children's chapter book" best-seller list, that is. The same list features "Twilight: Director's Notebook" by Catherine Hardwicke. Just sayin'.

Green giant

It's the summer of Ryan Reynolds: First he struck comedy gold with Sandra Bullock in $100 million-earning "The Proposal."

Now, Reynolds has landed the starring role as superhero Green Lantern, Variety reports. Reynolds had been mentioned for the part along with "The Hangover's" Bradley Cooper and Jared Leto. In the end, studio execs will turn to Reynolds to make the ring-wearing hero shine on the big screen—production is expected to begin in January, according to Variety.

Jon plus one

Kate who? "Jon & Kate Plus 8" dad Jon Gosselin was photographed Saturday holding hands with a new gal pal, the New York Daily News reports, less than three weeks after his wife filed for divorce. Jon's new friend? Hailey Glassman, who joined Gosselin in St. Tropez aboard the yacht of clothing designer Christian Audigier. Glassman's father performed Kate Gosselin's tummy tuck in 2006, according to People magazine.

Bruno land

Bruno is No. 1 in America, but he might have to work on his stamina. Sacha Baron Cohen's "Bruno" topped all other movies at the weekend box office with an estimated $30.4 million haul, but the daily total slid from $14.4 million on Friday to $8.8 million Saturday to $7.2 million Sunday. Elsewhere, the Gay & Lesbian Alliance Against Defamation said Friday that while some of the film's sketches hit the mark, others "reinforce some damaging, hurtful stereotypes" about gay people.

Jenny, they got your number

The '80s inspired you to tease out your hair and wear way too much matching denim. But can they inspire you to work out? East Coast gym chain Retrofitness pumps '80s pop and screens classics like "Sixteen Candles." And now it has one of the best-known phone numbers of the decade: 867-5309. Billboard.com reports that Retrofitness recently bought the rights to the number, made famous in a song by Tommy Tutone. The chain has 50-plus locations and is eyeing expansion into Chicago and other major markets, according to Billboard.
